MASTER PLAN CREATED FOR CHURCHVILLE PARK IMPROVEMENTS

Monroe County Executive Jack Doyle today submitted the Churchville Park Master Plan to the Monroe County Legislature for adoption. The plan will guide the county in the future management and development of the park.

“This plan was developed with assistance from interested community groups and citizens at a series of public information workshops,” said Doyle. “As a result, the direction and priorities established in the master plan reflect a general public consensus on the future of the park.”

Improvements for the park are:

- Rebuild some of the existing park infrastructure including lodges, recreation fields, roads and water lines.
- Develop a new trail system and additional recreational access to Black Creek.

Long term projects comprise realignment of roads and development of additional recreation fields.

Plan highlights for the Golf Course include:

- Re-routing the East Course with five new greens, new irrigation, improved tees, and improved practice area and drainage.
- Improve drainage and irrigation on the South Course.
- Layout changes, drainage and irrigation improvements on the West Course.
- Longer range improvements to the clubhouse and maintenance facility.

The planning process included an inventory of existing park resources and features, and an analysis of their suitability for a variety of uses, including active and passive recreational activities. This inventory and analysis was also completed for the 27-hole golf course with help from a golf course architect.
